DESCRIPTION

The Institute of International Relations (IDIS) and the Centre International de Formation Européenne (CIFE) have joined forces to launch a summer university program on Euro-Mediterranean cooperation. Having a strong academic background on security, energy, migration and geopolitics, both institutions prioritize stability, prosperity, security and Europeanisation of the Mediterranean in their research programs. A joint educational activity will further enhance this goal by providing a comprehensive program to participants on the perspectives of regional cooperation and the relations of the broader region with EU and NATO. Distinguished academics and experts affiliated to both institutions will participate in the program to share thorough analysis on all aspects affecting the Mediterranean, one of the most strategically important regions of the world. Participants will have the opportunity to attend a one-week interactive program, contribute with their ideas to a genuine dialogue, participate to cultural activities and enjoy summertime in Athens, overall an unforgettable experience!
